

Ann Addison

Corporate Vice President and Chief Human Resources Officer
Northrop Grumman

Ann Addison is corporate vice president and chief human resources officer for Northrop Grumman, a technology company focused on global security and human discovery.

In this role, she is responsible for all aspects of human capital strategy and programs. Her responsibilities include organization effectiveness; change leadership; performance management; talent development and acquisition; succession planning; executive development; training; labor/employee relations; and compensation and benefits.

Addison has more than 30 years of business and human resources experience. She joins Northrop Grumman from Leidos, where she was executive vice president and chief human resources officer. Prior to joining Leidos, she was the vice president of human resources for Lockheed Martin Information Systems & Global Solutions. Addison has also served in other human resources management positions at Lockheed Martin, Global Exchange Services and General Electric Company.

She earned a bachelor's degree in business analytics from Indiana University.

Northrop Grumman is a leading global aerospace and defense technology company. Our pioneering solutions equip our customers with the capabilities they need to connect and protect the world, and push the boundaries of human exploration across the universe. Driven by a shared purpose to solve our customers' toughest problems, our 95,000 employees define possible every day.